Bishop John O. Barres of Rockville Centre, right, and other U.S. bishops from the state of New York concelebrate Mass at the Basilica of St. Mary Major in Rome Nov. 11, 2019. The bishops were making their “ad limina” visits to the Vatican to report on the status of their dioceses to the pope and Vatican officials. (CNS photo/Paul Haring) By Junno Arocho Esteves

VATICAN CITY (CNS) — Bishops should not give in to calls to be more combative cultural warriors in the world, said Bishop Nicholas DiMarzio of Brooklyn.

“The Gospel has an internal strength that doesn’t need to be waged as war but needs to be presented as God’s great gift,” Bishop DiMarzio said in his homily Nov. 11 during Mass at the Rome Basilica of St. Mary Major.

Bishop DiMarzio was the principal celebrant and homilist at the first Mass the bishops of New York celebrated during their visits “ad limina apostolorum” — to the threshold of the apostles — to report on the status of their dioceses.

The U.S. bishops’ last “ad limina” visits were eight years ago — in 2011-2012.

At St. Mary Major, the New York bishops celebrated Mass in the chapel that houses the Marian icon “Salus Populi Romani” (health of the Roman people).

After the Mass, the bishops walked down the stairs under the basilica’s main altar to pray before the silver reliquary that houses what tradition holds is a relic of the manger where Christ was born.

In his homily, Bishop DiMarzio reflected on the day’s memorial of St. Martin of Tours, the fourth-century bishop who served as a Roman soldier stationed in Gaul, now present-day France.

According to the early Christian historian Sulpicius Severus, while patrolling on a winter night, St. Martin cut his cloak in half and gave it to a poorly clothed beggar along a road.

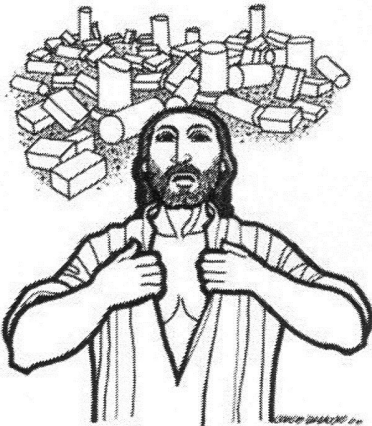

The following night, Severus wrote, the saint “had a vision of Christ arrayed in that part of his cloak with which he had clothed the poor man” and “hastened to receive baptism.”

Like St. Martin, Bishop DiMarzio said, Christians are called to “turn to Christ and recognize him in other people.”

He also noted that while the saintly prelate was known as a “warrior bishop” who fought against the Aryan heresy, St. Martin was also “careful” and made “sure that there was no error in his diocese.”

Bishop DiMarzio called on his fellow bishops to follow St. Martin’s example and “return to our dioceses renewed and refreshed with greater strength to make sure that our faith increases.” “We’re called to preach the Gospel,” which has its own power and is a gift, he said.

COMUNIDAD HISPANA

Para la reflexión

La fe nos invita a creer más allá de lo que vemos, ¿creemos verdaderamente en la promesa de que Dios nos va a resucitar? ¿Dejamos que la idea de la muerte nos angustie o pensamos que no es más que un paso necesario para encontramos con el Padre Dios que tanto nos quiere?

La resurrección es algo muy parecido a ese amor eterno que se prometen los que se casan. Lo que sucede es que el amor que se prometen los que se casan a veces no es en realidad eterno más que en la intención. Se termina, se acaba. A veces las personas no son capaces de mantener sus promesas. No se trata de pensar en quién es el culpable. La verdad es que somos muy limitados y a veces no podemos dar más de sí. La resurrección, en cambio, es la promesa de Dios. Y él sí que puede hacer esas promesas. Y mantenerlas. Y cumplirlas. Él nos ha prometido a nosotros, sus hijos, la vida eterna. Nos ha dicho que vamos a vivir para siempre. Porque no nos creó para la muerte sino para que vivamos y tengamos vida en abundancia.

¿En qué va a consistir la resurrección? Pues no sabemos con certeza. Pero vamos a confiar en Dios, nuestro Padre, porque todo lo que venga de él será bueno para nosotros. Y de él no puede venir más que la vida. Eso es lo que dice Jesús a los saduceos que le preguntan por ese complicado caso en el Evangelio: ¿Por qué tenemos que suponer que la vida eterna va a ser como ésta, así de limitada, así de pobre? ¿No es Dios un Dios de vivos? El que creó este mundo, ¿no será capaz de crear mil mundos distintos donde la vida se pueda desarrollar en plenitud, en una plenitud que nosotros, con nuestra mente limitada por las fronteras de este universo, no podemos ni siquiera imaginar? Una confianza así es la que manifestó la familia de que se nos habla en la primera lectura. No saben ni el cómo ni el cuándo ni el dónde, pero están seguros de que Dios los levantará de entre los muertos. Y de que hará buenas todas sus promesas. También nosotros creemos en él y estamos convencidos de que Dios hará eterna nuestra vida y eterno nuestro amor.
